FLECHETTE CARTRIDGE - A cartridge loaded with one or multiple finned steel dartlike projectiles. Many experimental varieties were made in the 1960s to increase firepower.

FLOBERT - A small-caliber (9mm or smaller) rimfire cartridge, usually used for indoor shooting in Europe. Shot versions were used for collecting bird specimens. They often have elaborate raised headstamps and many contain only primer compound.

FOLDED HEAD - An early method of case construction in which the case head is folded to form the rim and primer pocket.

FRANGIBLE BULLET - A bullet made of various powdered and compressed materials which was designed to break up on impact rather than penetrate. During World War II, .30-06 frangible bullets were used for practice against specially armored aircraft. This type of bullet is made in various calibers.
